

Maria Mendel is a professor at the Institute of Education, Faculty of Social Sciences, University of Gdansk, where she chairs Department of Social Pedagogy. She also teaches in a doctoral programme at the Academy of Fine Arts in Gdansk. She became a full professor of social sciences and the humanities in 2009. Mendel's work focuses on social pedagogy and sociology of education, particularly on the relations between subjectivity, memory and space, which is important in light of the current fractures between subjective lives and political space. One way of addressing this relation is by investigating cities, schools and universities as places. She has conducted research on place-conscious education and citizenships, memory-place and identity, adult education and lifelong learning, and parental engagement in schools. Her recent books: Eduwidma, rzeczy i miejsca nawiedzone [Edu-specters, things and haunted places], (Ed.) 2020; Parent Engagement as Power (Ed.) 2019; Miasto dla sztuki, sztuka dla miasta [City for Art, Art for City], (Co-ed.) 2018; Pedagogika miejsca wspólnego. Miasto i szkoła [Pedagogy of Common Places: the City and the School] 2017.